Making Room for One Another This Holiday Season

As we enter the holiday season, our calendars begin to fill with family gatherings, traditions, and celebrations. For many, this is a joyful time of year. But for others, the holidays can bring an ache that is difficult to put into words. Some may be facing their first Thanksgiving or Christmas without a spouse, parent, child, or dear friend. Others may be experiencing loneliness, family struggles, or a season of life that feels especially heavy.

As we celebrate, let us be mindful of those around us. A familiar tradition may feel different for someone this year. A seat at the table may be empty. A phone call that once came every holiday may never come again. We may not always know who is hurting, but we can choose to be people who notice, reach out, and make room for one another. An invitation to dinner, a thoughtful message, or simply sitting beside someone can mean more than we realize.

Scripture reminds us in Romans 12:15, “Rejoice with those who rejoice, weep with those who weep.” We are called to share in one another’s joys and sorrows, not just on Sundays, but in the everyday moments of life. Let us draw near to one another, bear one another’s burdens, and love each other as Christ has loved us.

And in the middle of the busyness, the traditions, and even the heartache, let us remember the One at the center of it all. The holidays are not ultimately about perfect gatherings or perfect circumstances. They remind us of the greatest gift ever given: Jesus Christ. Because of Him, we have hope that reaches beyond our grief, peace in the middle of uncertainty, and the promise that we are never truly alone.

One of the most beautiful truths of our faith is that we can call God “Abba, Father.” Romans 8:15 reminds us that we have received the Spirit of adoption, by whom we cry, “Abba, Father.” This is the language of a child who belongs, who is loved, and who can come close to the Father. When the world feels unfamiliar, when grief leaves an empty place in our hearts, or when loneliness settles in, we can draw near to the God who welcomes us as His children.

May we reflect that same love to those around us. May One Hope be a family where no one has to carry their burdens alone, where the hurting are welcomed, the lonely are remembered, and every person is reminded of the love of Christ.

This holiday season, let us do more than celebrate together. Let us love intentionally, reach out compassionately, draw near to our Heavenly Father, and remember the Savior who brings us hope.

“Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God.” — 1 John 4:7 (KJV)
